Thanks John, I don't see any red flags in the overview. If we wanted to address both of Allison's comments in one go, we could add something like the sentence in red to the end of paragraph 2:

"EPA partially approved and partially disapproved Oregon's 2012 submittal. This action includes changing the classification of 714 stream segments affected by ongoing litigation over temperature water quality standards. The action also identifies 285 waterbodies not fully analyzed in Oregon's submittal. These waters (999 in total) have been added to Oregon's 2012 303(d) Impaired Water Bodies List."

Hi John,

Just wanted to circle back on this time sensitive ask. I will need to run this by Anna too.

Any edits / concerns ? Coming at this cold, my only minor suggestions to R10 are 1) can we say what those 700+ streams classification changed to (from what to what) and 2) can we say what the next step is for OR regarding what to do with the portion of their list which we rejected .

Here's a simplified statement for reaction only. If we get queries that go deeper than the statement, we can refer people to the letter and/or the website where we have a response to comments document on our website that has approved language/rationale for the ocean acidification business.

We expect that the state will have neutral statements to make if they get called.

I've attached our letter, which may be edited further to be consistent with the statement.

Thanks for your help!
